of classes, despite the fact that three of the Charles City's five elementary schools were destroyed.

Dark to dawn curfews remained in effect at Charles City and Oelwein to prevent looting. Charles City officials are eyeing dormitories at the Charles City College for permanent housing facilities. The college, out of the tornado's path, is closing at the end of the trimester for lack of funds.

In Washington, the Small Business Administration declared Iowa a disaster area, allowing owners of homes, businesses, churches and charitable establishments to apply for 3 per cent interest loans for repairs.

LBJ Sympathizes

President Lyndon Johnson extended his sympathy Friday night to people in northeast Iowa stricken by the tornado.

Two engineers and an architect from Iowa State University are surveying Oelwein's damaged buildings to determine which are safe or unsafe.

Parts of the city hall were approved for use if the walls are shored. They emphasized, however, that no one should be allowed in the south quarter of the building.

One Floor Unsafe

The third floor of the junior high is termed unsafe, with the first and second floors approved for use if debris is cleared. The auditorium was rated unsafe and roped off. Its walls probably will have to be replaced.

The top floor of Central School at the south end was condemned. The Christian Church was rated a total loss and condemned, while other schools and Sacred Heart Church and school were approved for use.

Iowa Civil Defense Director George Orr said yesterday federal and state officials will meet with city and county officials in the devastated cities Wednesday to explain what aid is available for rebuilding. The meetings will be at 9:30 a.m. in Oelwein and 3 p.m. in Charles City.

Ex-Waterloo Man Dies in Bar Brawl

A former Waterloo man was fatally stabbed in St. Paul, Minn., last night in what police said was the result of a bar-room argument.

James D. Robinson, 29, was dead on arrival at St. Paul Ramsey Hospital of a stab wound over the heart, police said. His body was taken to the Ramsey county morgue for an autopsy.

According to authorities, Robinson and another man had been arguing in Happy Harry's bar, located in the Selbydale area of St. Paul.

Slapping Noise

The bartender broke up the argument, but told police the two men began arguing again. Before he could intervene, the bartender said, he heard a slapping noise, and Robinson fell backward over a table.

His assailant, described as being 25 years old and wearing a green shirt, ran out the back door.

Police said an all-points bulletin had been issued for the man who stabbed Robinson. They said the man had been identified by numerous residents.

Relatives of Robinson in Waterloo were notified of the death by a cousin of Robinson's, Ronald Frazer, of St. Paul.

Allied Troop in West Berlin Parade

BERLIN (AP) — U.S., British and French troops paraded yesterday in raw and rainy West Berlin weather that caught the rear foot soldier contingents in a downpour.

Despite the unseasonable weather, police estimated 25,000 spectators watched the annual two-hour military show, billed as Allied Forces Day.

Nuclear-Powered Weather Satellite Falls Into Pacific

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—A Nimbus weather-watch satellite vehicle went awry, was intentionally blown up and fell into the Pacific yesterday with its two nuclear-powered generators.

The atomic capsules "were designed and tested to withstand ocean impact and sea water corrosion in case of such an abort," a U.S. Space Agency spokesman said.

"Extensive tests have shown that under ocean conditions the fuel will present no hazards to people or marine life."

A Navy vessel was dispatched to search the area "in preparation for undertaking possible recovery operations."

The device and its booster fell into the ocean between Vandenberg Air Force Base and San Miguel Island, 45 miles south of Vandenberg and 95 miles west of Los Angeles.

The 1,260-pound observatory, million Nimbus program, was aimed south toward a polar orbit. Two minutes after liftoff it was destroyed because of a malfunction in the Thorad-Agena D booster.

Advancing Nimbus techniques are expected to extend forecasts up to two weeks, eventually saving $2 billion annually in industrial losses from weather.

First Destroyed
The Space Agency spokesman said this was the first vehicle equipped to collect all data needed for computerized forecasting. It was the first Nimbus destroyed in the program. If it had achieved orbit it would have been called Nimbus 3.

The vehicle launched yesterday carried two nuclear-powered generating systems, each with a half-pound pot of plutonium 238 worth $500,000. They were designed to keep the satellite operating a year longer than is possible with power from solar cells, which convert sunlight into electricity but deteriorate after a few months from radiation in space.

The 5-by-2-inch metal capsules containing the plutonium 238 were built to endure 3,000 degree re-entry heats and impact anywhere on earth.

TOWER COLORS
PARIS (AP) — Parisians love their Eiffel tower but many would like to see it in a different color scheme. The newspaper France-Soir determined in a poll that nearly 26 per cent prefer gray, more than 16 per cent suggest tricolor—blue, white and red—applied in either vertical or horizontal stripes and 12 per cent want blue. The present chestnut pastel is favored by almost 10 per cent.

Surprise Visit
The surprise visit came amid reports that some Soviet Communist party leaders want strong Kremlin action to halt Czechoslovakia's liberalization drive before it goes too far.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Kosygin met with Czechoslovak Communist party chief Alexander Dubcek, Premier Oldrich Cernik, President Ludvik Svoboda and Parliament President Josef Smrkovsky. It added they met in a "friendly and cordial atmosphere."

A Czechoslovak statement, however, said the conferences were held "in a spirit of comradely frankness" and that they "fully confirmed the validity of basic permanent principles of relations" between the two countries and their Communist parties.

No Progress in Paris Negotiating

spokesman, asked what might happen if the Americans failed to heed the demand, said the United States in that case "will bear the full responsibility."

The recesses of the talks have been progressively longer. This one, the third, is a day longer than the last and two days longer than the first. Nobody yet has officially used the term deadlock, but the pattern suggested an agonizingly slow pace.

Harriman spoke for an hour and a half at yesterday's session, demanding principally that the North Vietnamese be "realistic" and admit what they never conceded, that they have sent troops to South Vietnam.

His statement ranged over the history of reports all the way back to the late 1950s detailing North Vietnamese activity.

They spoke for two hours, his words choleric and accusatory. He not only failed to admit that Northern troops were in the South but insisted that the United States had been the aggressor from the start, that the United States "pretends to favor self-determination for South Vietnam, but in fact engages in intervention."

To this, Harriman retorted that the United States many times has been on record for self-determination in South Vietnam on the basis of "one man, one vote," and "I add that the South Vietnamese should be free from outside interference and coercion."

No Progress
Up to now, U.S. spokesmen have been steering clear of conveying a feeling of pessimism, but the chief American delegation spokesman, William J. Jordan, characterized yesterday's session as one of no progress.

"I would say that today, as in the last meeting, we tried repeatedly to turn the discussions into matters we regard as substantive and met with very little response," he said. "I must say we didn't make much progress. I can report none."

Jordan said Harriman had asked that the next meeting be Wednesday. The North Vietnamese had wanted Tuesday, but Jordan said the chief U.S. negotiator had an appointment that day.

He did not elaborate and denied a rumor that Harriman had plans to fly back to Washington in the interim.

What Is Hanoi's Real Intent?
WASHINGTON (AP) — Official American sources pictured the week-old U.S.-North Vietnamese talks yesterday as still in the sounding-out stage, with more probing needed to determine Hanoi's real intent about negotiating on the war.

The U.S. sources declined to set any deadline on the Paris discussions—though they did say North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam is going ahead at a record rate.

Communist infiltration into South Vietnam during April and May—the two months since President Johnson's March 31 outback in the bombing of the North—is running at a level which may surpass any previous volume, they said. They gave no specific figures. Earlier, administration sources had spoken of some 100,000 troops infiltrating in January-April.

The American official sources, who spoke to newsmen under rules barring direct quotation by name, met with newsmen to review the first week of exchanges between the United States and North Vietnam through their special envoys at Paris.

According to the Washington analysis:

Much as Expected
The first sessions between America's W. Averell Harriman and North Vietnam's Xuan Thuy have proceeded pretty much as expected.

One principal stumbling block emanating from North Vietnam's position at Paris has been what U.S. officials term a Communist tale of fantasy thrown over the real situation in South Vietnam. Hanoi does not acknowledge North Vietnamese troops are in South Vietnam, it claims vast military successes, and it portrays North Vietnamese and South Vietnamese as being in a single rather than a divided country.

From the U.S. standpoint, the Paris talks must deal with the Vietnam situation as it exists if they are to make progress.

Reciprocity
Also a key issue, in Washington's opinion, is reciprocity. The North Vietnamese have failed to indicate so far what any military restraint they would exercise in return for the bombing halt they demand of the United States.

They are calling even for a stop to U.S. reconnaissance flights over the North, without offering to curb their intelligence forces scattered throughout the South.

U.S. diplomats do not know yet whether or when the two sides will reach a point where they begin holding their talks in private, rather than the semi-public fashion of the meetings so far. The North Vietnamese seem prepared to stay at Paris for awhile. The Americans are not setting a time limit.

Cyclists Hurt But Escape 2nd Crisis
An ambulance carrying two seriously injured men to Scholtz Memorial hospital stopped suddenly to avoid a collision that an ambulance attendant suffered a possible broken leg and was hospitalized about 7 p.m. yesterday.

The two Washburn men, Steven R. Adams, 20, 328 4th St. and Peter John Rozmus, 19, of Many, both riding on a motorcycle were struck by a hit and run automobile driver at the intersection of Highway 218 and Maple St. in Washburn, a deputy sheriff reported.

The two men were reported to have suffered severe injuries on the head and legs. They were traveling north on Highway 218 and were making a left turn when a car approached from the south on the highway and struck the motorcycle according to a report by the deputy.

While a Waterloo Ambulance Service ambulance was taking the men to the hospital, the ambulance had to make a sudden stop on Ridgeway Ave. to avoid hitting another car that pulled in front of it, the sheriff's office said. As a result, an ambulance attendant, James R. Burton, 23, 1823 Plymouth Ave., was thrown against the inside of the car, suffering a possible broken leg.

France

Gaulle's absence with the defense and interior ministers and other security chiefs.

Earlier yesterday, some 10,000 students and veterans opposed to the leftist character of the protest movement marched up the Champs Elysees, one of Paris' main boulevards. Police squads turned the demonstrators away from Left Bank areas held by striking university students.

Red Flag Revolution
The red flag of revolution was raised over factory after factory across the countryside. The big trade unions made clear the strike wave came from the grassroots locals. They urged its spread.

Uncounted thousands of workers walked off their jobs, joining more than 100,000 who had downed tools earlier in the tumultuous week.

It was obvious the workers had taken their cue from university students who showed, through riots, sit-ins and other demonstrations, that direct action paid off.

Switches Stand
The General Confederation of Labor, a big pro-Communist federation, switched its stand to "reaffirm the solidarity of the workers with the students and teachers."

The CGT had warned the students Friday to mind their own business after they announced their solidarity with workers of the strike-bound Renault auto factory in Paris.

But the students, still in occupation of most of the country's universities, were fading into the background as the workers' upheaval captured the headlines.

The parliamentary pot was also on the boil as the time approached for debate on a motion of censure of the government next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Four Hurt In Separate Crashes
Four persons were treated for minor injuries at Scholtz Memorial hospital yesterday afternoon after a pair of accidents which occurred almost simultaneously.

At 4:48 p.m., police were notified of a crash in the 3400 block of Falls Ave., in which Lloyd Lee Bristow, 43, and his wife, Wanda May, 49, both of 322 Conger St., were injured.

Police said the accident happened when a car driven by David P. Fencl, 23, of 1309 Englewood Ave., traveling west, swerved to avoid another car, drove left of the center line, and struck the car driven by Bristow nearly head-on.

Fencl was cited for failure to yield half the traveled portion of the roadway.

Three-Car Accident
Two minutes later, police were notified of a three-car crash at the corner of Kingsley and Fletcher Avenues.

Injured were Phyllis June Stover, 23, of 318 Sunset Rd., and Sharla Marie Smith, 23, of 3107 Falls Ave.

According to police, the crash occurred when a car driven by Mrs. Smith, going west on Kingsley, went through a stop sign, striking a car driven by John Allen Peck, 25, of 442 Vaughn St.

The Peck car was forced into the third vehicle, driven by Ted Alan Stover, 24, of 318 Sunset Rd.

Mrs. Smith was cited for entering a through street.

Scholtz Memorial Hospital said one of the four injured were admitted.
